

Greyhound Rescue of New York

July 2017 Newsletter

There is a change coming. I know there an old saying about - if it not broken, don't fix it - that being said you may wonder what is changing; GRoNY's website is not broken, it is being changed and updated. It is planned for the new web page to go live by Sunday evening. Just a nudge for those who may not have checked into the website www.greyhoundrescueofny.com lately and for those who have and have sent inquiries, now you know why some items were not viewable. Mark your calendar to check out the updated website Sunday evening, and the events page which is filling up with familiar clinics, and events which GRoNY has been invited. To name a few: Steve Caporizzo's Pet Connection event, Saratoga Farmers Market, BJ's BBQ America, and the Carrot Festival. GRoNY would like to say a huge thank you to our previous webmaster for the many years and watchful technical eyes on keeping the web page active. GRoNY extends a big welcome to the new webmaster, who has taken on the challenge of creating and maintaining GRoNY's updated and into the coming years website.

Gosh I broke the exciting news and now I've probably lost your attention to read any further. I will just remind everyone that it is important to check your greyhound for ticks, and yourself also. Not only because of possible Lyme disease from deer ticks however there is now a lesser known more dangerous tick-borne illness, which effects humans, the Powassan virus, which was documented recently in Saratoga county.

This is the part of the newsletter where I say nice chatting with you again. Remember the longest day in meteorology has passed and now OMG days are getting shorter, so if you have not started enjoying July, get out there with your greyhound, even if the previous paragraph is a bit scary, there are many who do not have as much as we are fortunate to enjoy.
